Wait a minute, Greg. I have a friend who is Asian. Her name is Ashna. I'm sure she could teach you about her culture.

Really?

Yeah. The problem is she lives in Manchester now. But I'm sure we could visit her there.

6.2 Write down all the underlined expressions in a list and add the German equivalents.

Greg: It might be a strange thing for a boy to say, but you are the only person that I really trust.

Josh: How come you trust me? I publish everything you say on Facebook.

Greg: Very funny indeed. No, I really mean what I say. You are a true friend. And I have told you things that I have never told anybody else.

Josh: Have I ever made a promise that I would keep your secrets?

Greg: I thought you had. Maybe not. So who knows of all my tattoos?

Josh: I didn't know you had tattoos.

Greg: I was just kidding.

Josh: It's about time for you to get a tattoo. Every super surfer has a tattoo.

Greg: Well, I promised my parents I wouldn't get a tattoo. And I always keep promises.

Josh: That's what I like about you, Greg. I've never had a friend like you before.

Greg: Doesn't Maya always say boys aren't good at talking about their feelings. She'd be very proud of us.
